SNOW CONTINES FALLING IN SOUTH

RECORDS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN EASILY BROKEN IN SEVERAL SOUTHERN CITIES STILL MORE FORECAST FOR TODAY

Washington, Jan 28.—The snow which last night and today covered a large section of the Southeast and the Northeastern states with a heavy blanket, continued tonight in many sections of that region, with more forecast for tomorrow. The weather bureau tonight also ordered continuation of the storm warnings off the Atlantic coast from Cape Henry to Cape Hatteras, announcing that the disturbance which brought the snow and high winds to the Eastern section of the country, was centered near Cape Hatteras and moving north-westward with increasing intensity and attended by northeast gales.

Unsettled weather tomorrow, with snow likely, was forecast for sections of the Northeastern states and for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia. Generally fair weather was promised for the remainder of the region east of the Mississippi with no important temperature changes indicated.

Another storm of marked intensity was reported to have formed over the Western plateau region.

Snows attending the Eastern disturbance with the fall at a number of points establishing records for considerable periods were experienced today in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, the Carolinas, eastern Tennessee and northern Georgia.

SCORE INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK

Southern No. 20 Crashes Into Mountain of Dirt West of Noland

Asheville, N. C., Jan 28.—Conductor James Rickard and 18 passengers were slightly injured when Southern railway passenger No. 20 crashed into a mountain of dirt and rock that slid onto the Murphy division track, a short distance east of Noland, today.

Engineer F. W. Poindexter, driving the engine around a sharp curve, saw the slide coming and throwing on the emergency brake he and Firemen Frank Pennington jumped to safety just before the pilot of the engine jammed into hundreds of tons of dirt that came crashing down the mountain side, covering the railroad track and the public highway for a considerable distance.

The injured, all citizens of Jackson and Swain counties, are:

Harrison Davis, forehead lacerated.

W. N. Nesbit, left hip dislocated.

Conductor James Rickard, right arm and leg seriously hurt.

Miss Mary West, face and teeth.

G. B. Bradshaw, face and teeth.

The remaining 11 sustained no serious injuries necessitating hospital attention.

A slide occurred at this same spot about a week ago and Engineer Poindexter stated he had been watching for further trouble. This morning as his locomotive neared the place, he espied a tree moving down the mountain which warned him of the impending danger and probably served as a life saving signal to all on board the train.

The slides on the Murphy division of the Southern where the tracks parallel mountain streams and hug almost perpendicular mountain sides along the highest railroad point east of the Rockies, have been frequent during the past ten days, it is believed, as a result of heavy rainfall and swollen streams.

Seven inches at Raleigh
Raleigh, N. C., Jan 28.—Snow which began falling here early last night, had reached a depth of seven inches at 8 o'clock this morning. The snow is general over the state. Street car service here was demoralized today.

"LISTEN TO ME"

Musical Comedy Coming To Opera House February 8

It is doubtful if any of our massive extravaganzas, including the "Wizard of Oz," ever offered more genuine novelties than are presented in the season's smartest musical fantasy—"Listen to Me," coming to the Grand Opera House Wednesday night, February 8th. There are no less than a dozen novel ideas that develop into real features during the progress of the production; each excelling the preceding one in marvel. During the first act, a dancing novelty is introduced, where the six temptations, each representing the respective characters of wine, women, song, gambling, tobacco and racing show technique in art. This is extremely novel to say the least. Later comes the Imp "pony" ballet, dressed in devilette costumes, dancing in the blazing inferno. Following this, comes the snow-battle at the North pole with the Eskimo "pony" ballet, the snow man, and the midnight serenaders with the famous sleigh bell ballet; while the inspiring Aurora Borealis flits across the heavens merrily evolving the melodious strains. Then comes Candyland—something new in novel stage setting. Le Comte and Flesher's newest
